Efficacy: A Significant Reduction in RSV Hospitalizations

The only RSV – Specific monoclonal antibody

Simple, Monthly IM Injections- No I.V Lines, No Infusion Clinics

- ◆ The recommended dose of Synagis™ (palivizumab) is 15 mg/kg of body weight, given once a month during the RSV season. In tropical climates, it occurs in the rainy season.
- ◆ Physicians can administer IM injections of Synagis™ in their own offices or clinics.
- ◆ Synagis™ does not interfere with routine immunizations.
- ◆ Synagis™ provides passive immunizations, hence a 'shield' against RSV lower respiratory tract infection in high risk children.
- ◆ No significant differences in drug-related adverse events between Synagis™ and placebo.
- ◆ Synagis™ prophylaxis was associated with a 55% reduction of RSV hospitalization in premature infants and children with CLD ( $p < 0.001$ ).

RSV

is your child protected?

The RSV season is approaching. Your child needs to be protected against this virus if they fall into the following groups:

- Your baby was premature, and is less than 6 months old during the rainy season
- Your infant has chronic lung disease and is less than 12 months old during the rainy season

In the above children, RSV can cause serious respiratory infection that can lead to long-term complications, even hospitalization and death.

Please ask your physician about ways to protect your child
